THE CORPUS JURIS-CYC ANNOTATIONS

Present all the current cases year by year, cumulatively under one alphabet.

State the new and developing law and not merely the holdings.

Show clearly and at once any extension, modification, distinction, limitation, exception, or qualification made by the new decisions to the text of the parent work—THE CORPUS JURIS-CYC System.

Make the new and developing law and applications of the law alike accessible with the least amount of search and effort.

Discriminate and distinguish new law from merely cumulative precedents.

Reduce in an orderly and scientific manner the thousands of decisions which are handed down each year to the rules and doctrines as they appear in the main body of the CORPUS JURIS-CYC System.

Point out and annotate new and difficult points and conflicts.

Supply a local Supplement for each State annually to answer the question, "What does my State hold?"

The result is a continuous supplement with CLASSIFICATION BY PRINCIPLES, dispensing with the artificialities which must arise in classification by facts. For there can be no better arrangement than one founded on the principles of the law, with their ramifications, exceptions, limitations and qualifications, scientifically stated. The principles in themselves afford the utmost uniformity and permanency of arrangement whereof a growing science like the law is susceptible.

To assert that the law of EVEN ONE year ago is all-sufficient to-day is to assert that the "case law" has not been added to, developed or changed, and that the 30,000 new decisions handed down each year are of no value to the profession.

FREE CITATION SERVICE

A subscriber to the CORPUS JURIS-CYC Annual Annotations can always obtain from us citations of the very latest cases on any proposition.

Upon application our Bureau of Annotations will send him without charge, by mail or telegraph [telegraph charges collect], as he may elect, citations of all cases to any stated proposition in CORPUS JURIS-CYC, subsequent to the last published Annual volume of Annotations.

It will not give him legal advice nor prepare briefs for him, but it will furnish, free, the latest citations to the propositions as above stated.

To receive the most prompt and specific response always give page, section and note number of the proposition in CORPUS JURIS or CYC on which you want citations.

When desired, cases will be photographed for our subscribers at a nominal charge.

Always consult the Annual Annotations to any proposition of law in which you are interested, for you are always likely to find some case there on all fours with your point; for the law is always growing, spreading and sending out new shoots, as well as changing.

Every year brings upward of 100,000 new citations—permanent additions to the System and many of them virtually new law.

SPECIAL PHOTOGRAPHIC SERVICE

We are prepared to furnish our subscribers Photographic Copies from the original reports of cases cited in Corpus Juris, Cyc, or Annotations, or of cases subsequent thereto, at a merely nominal cost per printed page.

MINIMUM charge for any one case 50 cents.

NOTICE! To avoid bookkeeping, as we are giving this service at cost, and to insure prompt answer, the above amount of 50 cents—stamps will do—for each case should accompany your order if sent by mail.

IMPORTANT

AFTER referring to the original Cyc article or Corpus Juris treatise ALWAYS consult the CORRESPONDING PAGE and NOTE number in the ANNOTATIONS for NEW CASES and the CORRESPONDING PAGE number to matter marked NEW for NEW PRINCIPLES.

"THE LAW is the LAST interpretation of the law given by the LAST judge." Don't overlook the latest decisions in this volume.

HOW TO USE CORPUS JURIS—CYC ANNOTATIONS

These annotations to the published volumes of CORPUS JURIS are prepared upon the general plan made familiar to the profession in CYC ANNOTATIONS. But many improvements designed to facilitate reference and to save space have been introduced.

CORPUS JURIS has been planned with special reference to its use in connection with its annual ANNOTATIONS. The two together constitute at all times an integral treatment of every subject, because every subject once each year is brought up-to-date by the inclusion of all later decisions. To make this possible, every minute text proposition in CORPUS JURIS is keyed with a note number, and particular propositions in the notes are further keyed with subdividing letters and figures. In each year's ANNOTATIONS every subsequent decision upon a proposition contained in either the text or the notes of CORPUS JURIS is set out under the same note, and proposition number. The reader turns from the treatment in CORPUS JURIS to the treatment of all later decisions in the ANNOTATIONS as easily and quickly as turning a page in consecutive reading.

Two classes of matter are contained in the ANNOTATIONS: (1) New citations and further illustrations or applications of existing propositions in CORPUS JURIS; and (2) new text propositions declared for the first time in cases decided after the treatise in CORPUS JURIS on that subject was published.

To find all the case law on any subject, always begin with the treatment in CORPUS JURIS. Having found the desired proposition there stated, you have all the case law up to the date of publication of CORPUS JURIS. Then simply turn to the same page and note number in the ANNOTATIONS, and there find every subsequent decision upon the same point. This concludes your search because the whole field of case law has then been covered. If the desired proposition is not in CORPUS JURIS, it is because it had not then been enunciated, but it is in the ANNOTATIONS if it is in any later case. Such matter is marked "New" in the ANNOTATIONS, and is placed under the page number to which the subject matter relates; it is also given a new note number showing the precise place in the CORPUS JURIS treatment where the matter logically belongs. If the new matter does not relate to any section in CORPUS JURIS, it is given a new note number, placed in the order where it logically would have fallen had it been available in the original treatise, and thereafter all additional cases on the same point will be given the same note number.

The heavy black-faced figures in the ANNOTATIONS refer respectively to page and note number of corresponding matter in CORPUS JURIS. The absence of a particular page and note number in the ANNOTATIONS indicates that there have been no new decisions upon the particular proposition since the date of publication in CORPUS JURIS.

Errata corrected will appear in the ANNOTATIONS under proper page and note numbers, thus rectifying such occasional errors as are inevitable in a work of the magnitude of CORPUS JURIS.

Always consult both CORPUS JURIS and its ANNOTATIONS, but use CORPUS JURIS first. Your search for authorities will then be made quick, sure, and complete.
